Please note that this question should not be confused with question AE1. In question AE1, the reference period is 2022 and, subsequently, annual amounts (interest, installments, subsidies) are collected. In question AF1, the question is whether, at the time of the interview (current year), the household has installments to pay for housing loans and, if so, monthly amounts are collected.

Only housing loans for the purchase of the main residence should be considered.

ID17. How many people work in your workplace?

If the person has doubts regarding the "place where they work", they should clarify that it is the "address where they work".

1 - the person knows the exact number: if more than 9, register in the respective bracket; if between 2 and 9, register in the respective bracket (2 to 9) and then register the exact number in ID17.1

2 - the person does not know the exact number: ask if they know the order of magnitude (approximate number) and record it in the most appropriate bracket;

3 - the person does not even know the approximate number: they should at least indicate whether or not it is less than 10.

IFB1 In [year-1], did you have income from self-employment/self-employment?

Please note that if the interviewee classified themselves as self-employed in 2022, they will in principle have income of this nature.

Regardless of the classification in ID1, if the individual has income from the previous year as a self-employed worker, they must register it here.

In cases where self-employment income concerns more than one member of the household (for example, a couple working in the same business), it is preferable to record all self-employment income in a single individual, rather than dividing it equally among the members of the household with self-employment income.
