Employability - Interactive tool 2010

CONTEXT

Almost half of Europe’s sugar factories have closed and almost 16,550 direct jobs have been lost since the reform of the sugar regime began in 2006.

At the plenary session of their Sectoral Social Dialogue Committee in February 2008, the social partners in the sugar industry acknowledged that, given the reform of the sugar regime and industrial change, workers could no longer be guaranteed long-term employment in the same company. They therefore decided to undertake jointly a project aimed at improving employability.

The work was carried out under standard 2 of the Code of Conduct, which stipulates that “the social partners in an industry agree in a socially responsible way, with the social impact in mind, with standard 2 of the Code of Conduct, on Education, Vocational and Lifelong Training.

The “Employability” project was launched in December 2008 with financial support from the European Commission. The initial results of this work were presented to the European Commission at a conference held on 23 October 2009.

The project has led to the creation of a practical, web-based tool that is accessible on the website www.eurosugar.org. These online materials provide the social partners with an attractive toolbox covering the following aspects:

- definition of the concept of employability;
- good practices both within and outside of the sugar industry, aligned with success factors;
- an analysis of the skills required in the sugar industry, the skills that have to be developed and the skills common to different trades;
- information on possible sources of funding for projects at European and national level.

This last section complements the Practical Guide to the Structural Funds, placed on the website eurosugar.org in 2004. The information about the European Union’s financial perspective for the period 2007-2013 has been updated (https://www.eurosugartoolkit.org).
